

AOVS hosts 3rd golf tournament

By Cordell Walker
Special to My Life
Tuesday, December 18, 2007

Alpha Omega Board Vice Secretary Christine Nourse and former Major League Baseball player Jack Clark.

The Alpha Omega Veterans Services Inc. recently held its third annual AOVS golf tournament and sports memorabilia auction.

The benefit was held at Ridgeway Country Club to raise funds for the organization's hospice/palliative care program, the nation's first program of its kind to specialize in services for disabled and displaced veterans.

Baseball legend Tommy John served as honorary chairman and former major league baseball players Jack Clark, John Costello, Danny Cox, Roy Sievers and Reggie Williams were on hand to lend their support.

Proceeds will be used to provide shelter, food, clothing and assistance with referrals for counseling, medical treatment and other services.

Cordell Walker (third from left), executive director of Alpha Omega Veterans Services, Inc. was joined by former Major League Baseball players Roy Sievers, Danny Cox, Reggie Williams, Tommy John and John Costello for the third annual AOVS golf tournament.

For more information about AOVS, call 452-5678.

Cordell Walker is the executive director of Alpha Omega Veterans Services, Inc.